Milestones

Peterborough Master Gardeners

In Memoriam - Don Nicholson

Don Nicholson

"The thing I remember most about Don was his sense of humour and his fascination with all things growing and living," said MG Rachel Burrows. "When he found out that I had bluebirds nesting in one of my boxes he immediately wanted to come out to see them."

As MGs Dianne and Gary Westlake and many other gardeners can attest, Don was also extremely generous, sharing his plants over the years. Says Dianne, "When he would come to our house for coffee, he frequently brought a plant. We have a number of them growing in our garden."

A genuinely kind and generous man, Don particularly loved orchids and roses, although he confessed to being more of a plant collector than a garden designer.

Don organized one of the first MG bus tours to the Ottawa area and did a trial run to make sure that everything worked and was worth a visit. He also planned and organized a trip to Cuba and was fascinated with the local flora and meeting the people. Don became zone director at a time when MGOI was going through a big period of change, making a tremendous contribution and keeping the Peterborough MGs aware of what was going on.

Although he struggled with health issues over the past few years, Rachel notes that "his faith and sense of humour carried him through many difficult times and he retained them both."

We will miss him.

Name: Children's Community Garden at Thunder Bay Botanical Conservatory

Date: Summer 2016

(Note... all families gave permission for photos to be taken)

Details: Members of Thunder Bay & District Master Gardeners have been cultivating a new 'friendship' with the Friends of Thunder Bay Conservatory. This community group has been working hard to put our conservatory back on the map with afternoon and evening events and children's activities. This year, the Friends guided the development of a community garden that featured a straw bale garden and new raised beds designed for children. Master Gardeners Holly Rupert, Susan Renaud, Hazel Baxter and Ralph Bullough assisted with the family planting event in June. The Friends maintained the garden over the summer and in September, a harvest event had children return to dig potatoes and pick squash. This is a partnership our group is aiming to strengthen in the coming year.

These classic country fairs were well attended with a wonderful selection of local produce on display and for sale, and an eager public interest in improving gardening knowledge.

President's Corner – Advice to Grow On!

This question from a member has given me the opportunity to talk about how social media has made an impact on our advice hours to the public:

“Are there any restrictions as to how advice is given to the public? For example, does it need to be given in person? Does the advice have to be given to someone in the group's region or can it be outside the region?”

Members of the Master Gardeners of Ontario agree to contribute 20 hours of volunteer work each year giving advice to the public. First of all, it's important to make sure that any advice activity you do is approved by your group in advance. In the past, advice was given in person or over the phone - on “hotlines”. We also have a fine tradition of writing articles for newspapers and newsletters.

Today, we are seeing more and more groups and members using social media to advise the public. Questions are answered via email and even on Facebook. Blogs are becoming more popular and topical; I learned about straw bale gardening on Holly Rupert's (Thunder Bay & District Master Gardeners) amazing blog.

And they have the advantage of being interactive so the public can comment and ask questions in response to a blog “article”. Halton MGs do an online gardening chat with CBC digital radio and Ed Lawrence on "Ontario Today" every week during the summer.

Questions from social media come in from all over Canada and beyond, so your hours are not limited to answering questions in just your group's region.

Twitter is another way of sharing your gardening expertise with the public. The hours may not add up to a lot, but groups and individuals can have an impressive impact and appeal to a younger generation of gardeners. The MGOI Twitter feed now has over 1,000 followers!

Social media is also a great way for more remote groups to fulfill their advice hour requirements.

The times they are a changin' – I'm glad we're changing with them!

Do you have a question or a comment? I'd love to hear from you: president@mgoi.ca

A Moment for Membership

Face to face contact is one of the best ways to attract new members ..... but not the only way.

We are excited to introduce a new ad to help attract new members. Many people have told us that they subscribe to gardening magazines and review the ads, so we thought we would give this a try. We were approached by Ontario Gardening Magazine which is publishing a special edition in October to celebrate Canada's 150th anniversary. Our ad will appear in the online edition in mid October, and paper copies will be available in Shoppers Drug Marts later that month. This edition will also contain an article by Guelph and Wellington Master Gardener Sean James.

This is a first step.

The idea in the future is to have a designated month for a membership recruitment focus, supported by ads and/or articles in magazines or local newspapers and providing information about Master Gardeners of Ontario. To go along with this, it would be great if groups who are able would have some kind of activity in Membership Month where the focus would be on new members. An open house perhaps?

How can you help?

- Let me know if you get any new member interest because of the ad.
- Let me know if you would like to be on a committee to explore, organize and execute this idea?
- If your group does an article for a local paper would the paper run the ad? Would you include the ad in your electronic newsletter?
- If you have a new member application on your group website, are you monitoring the inquiries in a timely manner?
- Use this ad as the first page of a presentation as a talking point to let your audience know we are looking for new members.
- Any other ideas?

A big thank you to Holly Rupert, Thunder Bay & District Master Gardeners, for designing this beautiful ad.
